FIVE HOME GAMES
Five home games are on the Elba football schedule this season. Last week The Clipper carried only four. The mistake was made in the Flora game which will be played in Elba, not away from home.

BOOKS MIGHT BE LATE
Books for use in Coffee County classrooms might arrive here a week after school starts, according to Xenon Hill, manager of the Elmore Store in Elba that supplies texts for the schools. Earlier in the summer he contacted the superintendent's office and was told school started Sept. 14. Consequently he ordered text books with a delivery date of Sept. 14. Since the board of education advanced the opening date, the books and students might arrive in classrooms seven days apart.

FIRST BALE OF COTTON
Elba's first bale of cotton in the 1953 season came into Morrow Gin & Peanut Company at 12:10 in the afternoon, August 3. John W. Stephens and L. C. Bryant of Damascus community on Route 4 collected $329.05 for the 570-pound bale.

The cotton, planted March 9, brought 54¢ a pound, this included a 10¢ per pound bonus paid by the Elba Jaycees as a premium on the first bale. Jake Morrow, gin manager, said there were 450 pounds of seed and 570 pounds of lint processed.

Bryan Taylor, Jaycees president, presented a check for $64 to the growers of the first bale. Morrow's Gin made up the rest of the difference between the 54¢ per pound and current market price.

RECEIVES EDITORIAL ASSIST
Bill Stokes, Coffee County's state representative, received an editorial assist this week from The Birmingham News on a piece of legislation he introduced in the house. The Dothan Eagle also commented on his legislation which would put state lawmakers on an annual salary of $1500. When contacted Saturday, Mr. Stokes said the bill had been killed in committee but he was going to reintroduce it.

The Birmingham News editorial Thursday, July 30, read: The proposed constitutional amendment putting future members of the Alabama Legislature on an annual salary increase of 10 percent is a valid solution of the problems created when the lawmakers persist in paying themselves per diem and expenses for days they did not work. The proposal, introduced by Rep. Stokes of Coffee County, would put the annual salary at $1500, payable in monthly installments, and forbid any other pay, allowances or compensation for the office.

The plan recognizes the fact that members of the Legislature have much to do as such outside the days the Legislature is in session. But it puts a whole new block on the opportunity now held and abused of increasing pay by extending sessions and taking long recesses. Annual pay is the most popular plan of states in paying legislators. Alabama should get in line.

The Dothan Eagle wrote: "The criticism that swamped the legislature when it took a two-week vacation with pay last month may yield some dividends yet."

Rep. Jackson W. Stokes of our neighboring Coffee County has introduced a constitutional amendment providing an annual salary of $1,500 for each member of future legislatures. Whether one agrees with the annual salary idea or not, it would stop vacations with pay. And this proposal shows the members of the legislature are concerned with abuses of the present system and want to do something about it.

Too, there is another indication that the legislature is sorry for what it has done and wants to make amends. There's a report going the rounds that it will adjourn two weeks earlier than planned so that the early adjournment will cross out the two weeks vacation pay and leave the treasury just where it would have been if there had been no vacation.

It's to be hoped there's some basis of fact in this report, but somehow, we just can't picture the legislature as that repentant.

Rural Mail Carrier Could Have Made Round Trip to Moon
By Paul Cunningham
With improvements made on jet airplanes and rockets recently, scientists have begun talking of trips to the moon and establishment of space platforms outside the earth's pull of gravity. Jess Blocker, mail carrier on Route 3, might not have been paying much attention to all this talk, but if he added up all the miles he has traveled while going over his route in Coffee County, he would find the distance more than enough to give him a round trip to the moon. And the space pilot who takes the first rocket ride to the moon probably won't run into these years, he is still one of Coffee County's eligible bachelors.

Jess' most unusual experiences came in the early era of rural free delivery in Alabama when Jess used a two-wheel cart for transportation. He got caught in a tornado in 1918 and trees were blown down across the road all over his route. By using an axe to clear the road, he came to one pasture and traveling across woods and pastures he made good progress. He had two gates, one pasture and the gate and "Ole Tom," his horse, waited for his master to give him the signal to stop.

Council Discusses Taking Over Utilities

Possibility that the city would take over operation of the light and water system were discussed at the council meeting at city hall Monday night.

Dr. C. P. Hayes, councilman, suggested the city might try to run the system when the contract now held by W. R. Matthews of Birmingham, comes up for renewal in December.

Mayor L. P. Mullins said he would have a new contract to present the council for approval at their next meeting. At that time it will be decided whether or not the city will take over and operate the two public utilities—water and lights.

Under the present set-up, Mr. Matthews pays the bill with the REA and gets 67.5% of the first $50,000 worth of current used in Elba and 55% of the next $5,000 worth. He also gets 20% of the gross net of current used by the Dorsey Trailers plant, Black Lumber Company and City Ice & Cold Storage, the biggest electricity users in Elba.

Mayor Mullins said these three firms were sold current almost at cost. Because their needs were so great, it pushed the city into a bracket where the cost per kilowatt hour was cheaper and a slight profit was made from selling them electricity. Twenty per cent of the gross net from sales to these three users meant $318.31 for Mr. Matthews last month. During the past month, Mayor Mullins told the council Matthews netted $2262.14 operating the electric system in the city.

On the water system, income is split 60% for Matthews and 40% for the city on the first $750, gross; 55-45 on the next $750 and 50-50 on everything over $1500. He pays all pumping expenses.

Mayor Mullins said the city use of electricity has increased 10 times in the eight years that the system has been under municipal ownership.

City, County Reach School Agreement

An amicable settlement between the Coffee County and Elba school boards was reached Tuesday night at the courthouse when the two groups met in a special session to work out an operational agreement. No major outward changes will take place as a result of the change-over in Elba to a city system.

Students from outside the corporate limits will be welcome to Elba schools and will not have to pay any tuition or fees. At the same time, school bus routes run by the county will remain substantially the same. James Wise, chairman of the city board of education, invited all rural education, invited all rural students to come to school here and predicted Elba would have the best school ever.

Armed with a proposal drawn up by the state department of education in Montgomery, the city board suggested it be adopted as a working agreement between the two groups. After a discussion, it was adopted with one change.

According to the agreement, the city board of education will take over operation of the white and colored schools in Elba effective August 4. Teachers will be paid by the county through August 31 and then be put on the city payroll. Deeds to the school property will be made over to the city board if the state department agrees that is the way it should be done. The state now holds title to the land and buildings.

The city will take its pro rata share of the county's bonded indebtedness. The state department will determine what this is.

and their decision will be binding on both boards. The knotty problem of the city council's debt to the county came up after a proposition was adopted with one change.

Present at the meeting for the county were H. J. Harrel, Enterprise; Jess Brown, Jack, Dallas Wise, Fairview; Frank Rainer Jr., Elba; R. L. Farris, county superintendent of education; J. C. Fleming, county attorney; Miss Nettie Walker and Mrs. Betty Sessions.

City representatives were S. J. Casey, city superintendent of education; James Wise, chairman of the city board of education and Solle Brunson, Max Reeves and Ed Kendrick, board members and C. L. Rowe, city attorney.

Pay Increase Sought By County Officials

A salary increase estimated at between $500-$800 a year would come to the Coffee County tax assessor and tax collector if a bill in the legislature to increase their fees on automobile tax collections and assessments is passed during this session. The county tax assessors and collectors of the state are sponsoring the bill.

Last week the State Department of Public Examiners released a table of gross compensation for these officials compiled from the audit reports of the tax year 1950-51.

At Coffee County the tax assessor received a gross compensation of $6,400.96 and the collector $5,445.61. Since these figures are gross instead of net, they do not take into account any salaries for hired help which officials on a fee basis usually pay from their own income.

Dr. J. O. Thomas Sets Up Medical Practice in Elba

Dr. Julius O. Thomas, who recently completed his internship at St. Vincent's hospital in Birmingham, will set up his office in Elba to practice medicine. He will share the offices and facilities of the Kinney Memorial Clinic with Dr. J. M. Kinney.

Dr. Thomas is a graduate of the University of Alabama School of Medicine and a veteran of four years Navy service. He is a native of Highland Home in Crenshaw County.

Dr. Thomas is married and expects his wife and small daughter to join him as soon as housing facilities can be found. Mrs. Thomas is a graduate nurse.

POOR ORIGINAL

NOW WE OFFER THE BEST GINNING SERVICE

Your Cotton Receives Processing
In Our Gin "Fit For a King"

With Recently Installed Equipment
Cotton Now Receives
FIVE SEPARATE
CLEANING OPERATIONS

HOW IT WORKS!!

Cotton going through the gin at Morrow Gin and Peanut Company now gets five separate cleaning operations. With the installation of a new 7-drum incline cleaner (far left in picture above) and a 14-foot Burr extractor, cotton processed here will go through twice as many cleaning operations as last year when new extractors, a tower dryer and incline cleaner were installed. This new equipment will enable Morrow Gin to process mechanically picked cotton and give the highest possible grading on hand picked cotton. When cotton comes to our gin, it passes over a 24-shelf dryer and four cleaning operations before it hits the saws. This gives cotton a top grading turnout. A thorough job is done on removing the bothersome pepper trash which lowers the grading of ginned cotton. Each operation of the gin is pulled by a separate motor, thus assuring top performance of each piece of machinery in the plant. With top performance of good machinery such as we have installed, and experienced help, the grower is insured that his cotton will truly receive "Service Fit for a King."

The Cotton Grower Profits

Your cotton will bring more profit when ginned by us. Small trash is removed and the grade of cotton is not lowered by this defect. A proper job of drying is done without damaging fiber or reducing the weight excessively. A minimum amount of heat can be applied to cotton going into our gin because it passes over 24 shelves before reaching the saws. With this system a minimum amount of heat is applied to the cotton over a large area. This enables us to properly dry it without injuring the fiber.

Top grading and turnout mean more money in your pocket. You worked hard during the spring and summer to grow this cotton. Labor to pick it is expensive. So don't take any chances with your margin of profit by risking faulty ginning. Bring your cotton to us and assure yourself of top grading and highest possible turnout on this year's crop. Morrow Gin & Peanut Company has kept up with technical advancements in the ginning field by installing thousands of dollars worth of new machinery. Your profit is higher when cotton is ginned in new and modern machinery such as we have installed.

WHICH WAY ARE YOU GOING TO FEED YOUR HOGS?

The picture above graphically illustrates how Purina Hog Chow saves money for farmers. In the small box at the left of the picture five bushels of corn costing $10.00 and 45 pounds of Purina Hog Chow costing $3.04 are required to produce 100 pounds of pork. Total cost is $13.04. On the right a large box contains 11 bushels of corn costing $22.00. Without the supplement this much corn is required to produce 100 pounds of pork. Cost of 100 pounds of pork feeding corn alone is $22. Feeding Purina supplement, it costs $13.04 to produce 100 pounds of pork. This leaves the farmer $8.96 worth of extra profit when he feeds Purina supplement.

CITY INSURANCE

A news article in the Montgomery Advertiser Aug. 6 dealt with the way the city council of Prattville handled its insurance business.

The article read: "All the local licensed insurance agents were called together recently and all the insurance policies of the city were placed before the group. Each was discussed with regard to proper coverage, best terms, etc. and a committee appointed to make a thorough study of the most advantageous coverage. Every type of insurance was included; automobile, buildings, fire and police cars and trucks, blanket position bonds, workmen's compensation, etc."

Their report, attractive bound, was submitted to the city council meeting this week and practically all the recommendations were adopted. These will be turned back over to the insurance agents committee and they will be responsible for seeing that each policy is placed as recommended. In turn, all participants of the insurance group will pool their commissions and an equal division will be made among all members.

The Prattville council calls this its own special "fair deal" policy. And it certainly is the best arrangement we have seen for apportioning a city's insurance business. Elba's city council might profit by looking into the operation of the plan.
